HOGAN

INTRODUCTION

The Motives, Values, Preferences Inventory describes peoples' core values, goals, and interests. This information is crucial for understanding the kinds of jobs and work environments people find congenial and will help them make better career decisions. This report provides information in terms of 10 value dimensions; each dimension contains five subscales concerning Lifestyles, Beliefs, Occupational Preferences, Aversions, and Preferred Associates.

- People use their values to make decisions, but they rarely analyze their values and often make decisions for reasons they do not fully understand. Becoming aware of their values should improve their decision-making.
- People prefer to associate with others who share their values. Thus, understanding values allows people to manage their relationships more effectively.
- If people choose careers and work in organizations whose cultures are inconsistent with their values, they are usually unhappy and unable to perform effectively. Conversely, if they choose careers and work in organizations that are consistent with their values, they are usually more satisfied and perform more effectively.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Mr. Doe's scores on the MVPI suggest that he:

- Values having his efforts noticed. He will prefer jobs where there are opportunities to work on high-profile projects.
- Wants to be productive and make a contribution. He will prefer jobs where he can contribute to the success of the team or organization and where there is room advancement.
- Wants to have fun while working in a relaxed and casual environment that offers a lot of variety, flexibility, and change.
- Values opportunities to help others, even when there will be no direct and tangible benefits. He will be most comfortable working in service-minded roles and organizations.
- Seems to enjoy his private time and being able to concentrate on his work. He does not need a great deal of interaction or team-based work.
- Values structure, hierarchy, authority, and appropriate workplace conduct. He will fit well in organizations that respect tradition and proper behavior.
- Needs structure and predictability. He will prefer working in organizations where the roles and expectations are defined and the future seems safe.
- Seems interested in matters other than money, material goods, and salary level; money is not a strong motivator.
- Does not have strong needs for creative self-expression. He seems more interested in functionality than fashion and design.
- Seems indifferent to research and scientific pursuits. He should be comfortable in roles or environments that value experience and intuition for decision-making.
